HUD.002.0389	1987	Book	The housing circumstances of the Maori people and the work of the Housing Corporation in meeting their needs : a report	Housing Corporation of New Zealand.; M. A. Bathgate;	(The Corporation);	Recently, the housing situation of Maori people has been receiving attention. In his report Fading Expectations, The Crisis in Maori Housing, prepared last year for the Board of Maori Affairs, Dr Edward Douglas of Waikato University identified a number of unsatisfactory features about the housing of Maori people. The Housing Corporation has carried out its own research into Maori housing, and agrees with the main conclusions reached by Dr Douglas. In particular, the quality of much rural housing is poor, and the level of home ownership among Maori people is unacceptably low when compared with the level in the remainder of the community.

HUD.002.0629	1996	Journal Article	The Quest for Social Responsibility: Social Policy Journal Of New Zealand Te Puna Whakaaro	B. Stephens; J. Boston; S. S. John;	(Ministry of Social Development);	New Zealand's recent economic reforms have reshaped the legislative framework for macroeconomic policies. The two crucial pieces of legislation are the Reserve Bank Act (1989) and the Fiscal Responsibility Act (1994), which aim to ensure price stability and that governments pursue prudent fiscal policies, respectively.	https://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/publications-resources/journals-and-magazines/social-policy-journal/index.html
HUD.002.0729	1999	Report	Housing and Mental Health: Reducing Housing Difficulties for People with Mental Illness	Mental Health Commission;	(Mental Health Commission);	People with mental illness are more likely to encounter housing problems and the negative impacts of poor housing. Finding a house for the first time, keeping one's current house, or moving into different accommodation, can all be major problems. In many cases, recovery requires specific housing arrangements that combine support, a quality physical environment and suitable social environment. Housing policy must ensure that people affected by mental illness have access to housing that supports their recovery and maintenance of good mental health, and options that prevent them falling into serious housing need. A wide range of options is required. This paper discusses home ownership, rental accommodation and supported housing.	https://www.moh.govt.nz/notebook/nbbooks.nsf/0/67D3DB3E20CE719BC256A53006CAFD9/$file/housing-and-mental-health.pdf

HUD.002.0799	2001	Journal Article	Mental Health and Housing Research: Housing Needs and Sustainable Independent Living: Social Policy Journal Of New Zealand Te Puna Whakaaro,	R. Peace; S. Kell;	(Ministry of Social Development);	Research to quantify the extent of independent housing need and homelessness and transience among people who experience mental illness, undertaken by the Ministry of Social Development, was commissioned as part of an interdepartmental work programme established by the Ad Hoc Committee on Mental Health in April 2000. Questions of affordability, adequacy and sustainability of housing form the core of the research. A key outcome from the research was the development of a typology focused on the idea of "sustainable housing" for consumers/tangata whai ora.	https://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/publications-resources/journals-and-magazines/social-policy-journal/index.html
HUD.002.0810	2001	Book	Reducing Maori and Pacific inequalities / The Treasury	Treasury;	(Wellington, New Zealand : New Zealand Treasury);	Over the last fifty years the Maori and non-Maori populations have slowly and unevenly become more similar on a range of key demographic, social and economic outcomes. This has principally been driven by increased geographic and social proximity between the two groups. There is evidence that similar processes may be operating for migrant peoples from the Pacific.
HUD.002.0811	2001	Journal Article	Sink or Swim: Leaving Care in New Zealand: Social Policy Journal Of New Zealand Te Puna Whakaaro	D. These young people comprise a very small and hidden population here, and very little is known about long-term outcomes for them, except that, anecdotally, they seem to begin to have children early, and to struggle to raise them without coming to the notice of child welfare services.	https://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/publications-resources/journals-and-magazines/social-policy-journal/index.html

HUD.002.0822	2002	Journal Article	From Rhetoric to Action: A Case for a Comprehensive Community-Based Initiative to Improve Developmental Outcomes for Disadvantaged Children: Social Policy Journal Of New Zealand Te Puna Whakaaro	Beth Wood; Emma Davies; Robert Stephens;	(Ministry of Social Development);	This paper aims to demonstrate the urgency of the need to combat child poverty in New Zealand and to action evidence-based strategies to improve outcomes for disadvantaged children. The objective is to promote the development of child-centred policies that will help to eliminate the conditions that create poverty. The paper reports on factors identified in reviews as being key components of successful programmes that intervene early in the lives of children and families to promote positive childhood outcomes. It describes the community-based Sure Start initiative currently being implemented and evaluated in England. It argues that a similarly resourced, community-based initiative could go a long way towards achieving improved outcomes for young children. In the opinion of the authors, it is timely to take a long-term strategic approach to defining social and economic priorities, by putting resources behind thoughtful policies and practices to promote the well-being of children, and thereby the future of the nation's development.	https://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/publications-resources/journals-and-magazines/social-policy-journal/index.html

HUD.002.0862	2002	Journal Article	Allocating Housing Assistance Equitably: A Comparison of In-kind Versus Cash Subsidies in New Zealand: Social Policy Journal Of New Zealand Te Puna Whakaaro	Stephen Waldegrave;	(Ministry of Social Development);	The 1992 housing reforms replaced a mixed system of state housing at income-related rents and a cash subsidy for those with high housing costs (the Accommodation Benefit) with a uniformly applied cash subsidy, the Accommodation Supplement. The housing reforms in the year 2000 reversed this change, reintroducing income-related rents. The key issues this paper addresses are whether the 1992 reforms increased or decreased equity by introducing the Accommodation Supplement, and the implications for equity of the reintroduction of income-related rents in 2000. In the analysis, two types of equity are considered - horizontal and vertical. Horizontal equity requires that those with the same housing need receive the same housing assistance, while vertical equity means that those with more need should receive more assistance.	https://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/publications-resources/journals-and-magazines/social-policy-journal/index.html
HUD.002.0873	2003	Report	Reconnecting Young People A Review of the Risks, Remedies and Consequences of Youth Inactivity: Youth Transitions Report Series 2003	K. While most young people in New Zealand successfully complete their years of compulsory education and then continue on with further education and training or start their working life, a significant number stop participating at some stage, for a variety of reasons.

HUD.002.0994	2006	Journal Article	From Mopping Up the Damage to Preventing the Flood: The Role of Social Policy in Preventing Violence against Children: Social Policy Journal Of New Zealand Te Puna Whakaaro,	J. E. Durrant;	(Ministry of Social Development,);	Sweden is a country where children's rights and developmental needs occupy the top level of the political agenda. There, child poverty is unacceptable, violence against children is not tolerated, a single child's death is too many - and extensive family support is woven into the fabric of the society. Where other nations have taken a punitive or neglectful approach to families facing challenges, Sweden has taken a proactive, preventive and supportive approach. The results are impressive: child poverty, child abuse fatalities and child homelessness are virtually nonexistent. A foundation has been created for family health and, as a result, children's potential to blossom is not squandered. This paper describes Sweden's approach to family policy in order to generate ideas for changes that could be made in Canada and New Zealand in order that children can thrive in these countries, too.	https://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/publications-resources/journals-and-magazines/social-policy-journal/index.html

Jensen; M. Matangi-Want; S. Sathiyandra;	(Ministry of Social Development);	This paper provides the rationale for the Ministry of Social Development's living standards research programme by describing the distinctive features of the Economic Living Standards Index (ELSI), the measure of living standards that provides the basis for the research. The paper draws on data collected in the 2004 national living standards survey to examine living standard variation in the population and factors associated with variation.	https://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/publications-resources/journals-and-magazines/social-policy-journal/index.html
HUD.002.1078	2007	Journal Article	The Dangers of Information Sharing: Social Policy Journal Of New Zealand Te Puna Whakaaro,	E. Munro;	(Ministry of Social Development,);	Both the New Zealand and British governments want to improve children's welfare and are seeking ways of improving preventative and early intervention services. This article critiques the policy being implemented in England with a particular focus on the role given to professionals collecting and sharing information about families as a means of screening children and deciding which ones to target. It is argued that this policy undermines parents and overestimates professionals' ability to predict future outcomes.	https://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/publications-resources/journals-and-magazines/social-policy-journal/index.html

The report was controversial and highly criticised at the time and has continued to arouse criticism since. In this paper we consider both the content of the report and its impact on a number of areas of continuing social policy significance. We find that, within those areas, a surprisingly high number of the proposals and recommendations have been put into practice, to a greater or lesser extent. Accordingly, we conclude that the report deserves to be evaluated in a more positive light than has often been the case.

Ambler;	(Maori Land Court);	In June of this year I had the privilege of attending the first World Indigenous Housing Conference in Canada where I presented a paper - Housing on Maori land: A Judge's perspective. There was a strong contingent from New Zealand including the Honourable Tariana Turia. Delegates also attended from Australia, the USA and, as expected, Canada. It was held in the city of Vancouver and was hosted by the indigenous peoples of the region including the Coast Salish, Musqueam, Squamish and Tsleil-Waututh nations. The conference covered a range of subjects associated with indigenous housing including governance; capacity building; government partnerships; construction problems; design issues; disaster preparedness; women in leadership; and homelessness.

HUD.002.1361	2012	Report	Housing Affordabilty	New Zealand Productivity Commission;		The Government has asked the Commission to evaluate the factors influencing the affordability of housing in New Zealand (both rental and owner-occupied) and to examine potential opportunities to increase affordability. The context of this inquiry is the recognition that stability of the home environment is important for social cohesion and family stability. There is a concern that real (inflation-adjusted) house prices in New Zealand are markedly higher than they were a decade ago and that this has been associated with general declines in housing affordability and home ownership rates. These declines have contributed to increased demand for rental accommodation and additional pressure on the social housing sector. The aim of this report is to suggest policy improvements that could enhance the performance of the housing market and the effectiveness with which it meets the needs of New Zealanders.

HUD.002.1462	2014	Report	Housing in greater Christchurch after the earthquakes: Trends in housing from the Census of Population and Dwellings 1991-2013	R. Goodyear;	(Statistics New Zealand Tatauranga Aotearoa);	This report describes the changes that have occurred in housing and the effects of housing changes on the population in the greater Christchurch area as a result of the Canterbury earthquake sequence that began in September 2010. Research overseas has shown that after a major disaster housing issues increase, particularly for vulnerable populations such as low-income households, some ethnic minorities, and one-parent families.
HUD.002.1470	2014	Report	What Works for Maori, Synthesis of Selected Literature	Fiona Cram; Les Williams;	(Department of Corrections);	The purpose of this review was to study evidence from five major domains of endeavour to identify a common set of interventions, initiatives, approaches and practices that increases understanding of what helps Maori succeed or improve outcomes in life.
HUD.002.1475	2014	Government Document	He Whare Ahuru He Oranga Tangata The Maori Housing Strategy	Ministry of Business Innovation & Employment;	(Ministry of Business Innovation & Employment,);	The role of this strategy is to support people's aspirations to have reliable and appropriate housing. This strategy shows how the government will support Maori-led housing programmes. Safe, healthy and affordable homes are important to us all. He Whare ahuru He Oranga Tangata - The Maori Housing Strategy sets out six directions to improve the way Maori whanau are housed. Better housing will support improved social and economic outcomes for Maori. The government acknowledges the ambitions of Maori and iwi to lead improvements in housing for their people, their desire to build on papakainga land, and the value they place on better housing and home ownership. It recognises that improving housing is part of a long-term vision for Maori to control their own affairs and provide a better future for whanau now and for future generations.
HUD.002.1492	2014	Report	Ministry of Social Development: Using a case management approach to service delivery	Office of the Auditor General;	(Office of the Auditor General);	This report looks at the Ministry of Social Development (the Ministry) and its case management approach to delivering services. We looked at the approach the Ministry uses for working-age adults in its 160 Work and Income service centres. We decided to look at this aspect of case management because the Ministry provides financial and employment assistance to about 294,000 people each week. Work and Income's staff costs were $186 million in 2013/14, and it pays out more than $8 billion annually in financial support.

HUD.002.1540	2015	Government Document	Baseline valuation of the social housing system	Ministry of Social Development;		This report is the first ever life-course valuation of New Zealand's social housing system. The purpose of this valuation is to provide information about New Zealanders' projected lifetime housing pathways and costs to assist the Ministry of Social Development (MSD) to manage the social housing system. This approach builds on similar valuations conducted of the working-age benefit system over the last five years. These valuations are the principal evidence base underlying the Government's 'investment approach' to reducing long-term benefit receipt. The investment approach is an evidence-based policy and delivery framework, which is intended to be expanded across the social sector.

HUD.002.1806	2018	Report	Crown/Maori Relations Summary of Submissions	Ministry of Justice;		On 19 March 2018, the Minister for Crown/Maori Relations, Hon Kelvin Davis, launched an engagement process to get the views of New Zealanders on how the Crown/Maori relationship should be strengthened. The Minister sought feedback through hui around the country and by inviting written submissions. This report captures the key themes that were heard throughout the engagement process. The report emphasises submitters' voices by focusing on their own words to highlight the main issues and opportunities that were raised. The kaupapa did not lend itself to a traditional submissions summary report, which tend to paraphrase and summarise submissions. By using submitters voices to capture the kaupapa, the report demonstrates the breadth of feedback that was received, and highlights the complexity and nuances of the Crown/Maori relationship. The report tries to reflect the range of unique insights that were provided on the key issues that people talked about.

HUD.002.1863	2019	Report	Have Your Say: Summary Report - National Engagement of Tamariki Tu Tamariki Ora	Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet;	(Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet,);	This report has been prepared by the Child Wellbeing Unit, Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet. The Child Wellbeing Unit was established to support the Prime Minister, in her role as the Minister for Child Poverty Reduction, and the Minister for Children in the development of New Zealand's first Child and Youth Wellbeing Strategy (the Strategy). We asked children, young people and adults to tell us what good wellbeing means to them, to identify the things that get in the way, and tell us what we should do about it. We are grateful to the more than 10,000 New Zealanders, including over 6,000 children and young people, who contributed to this report by sharing their thoughts, knowledge and expertise with us. The Office of the Children's Commissioner and Oranga Tamaraki led the engagement with children and young people, and many of the views and voices of children and young people presented in this report have been drawn from their joint report: What makes a good life? Children and young people's views on wellbeing.

HUD.002.1897	2019	Government Document	Homelessness Action Plan	Ministry of Housing and Urban Development;	(Ministry of Housing and Urban Development);	The Aotearoa New Zealand Homelessness Action Plan (2020-2023) has been developed to prevent and reduce homelessness. It sets out an overarching framework with actions to improve the wellbeing and housing outcomes of individuals and whanau who are at risk of, or experiencing, homelessness. It is a shift in the way the government responds to homelessness. It is a multi-year cross-government roadmap towards the Government's vision that 'homelessness is prevented where possible, or is rare, brief and non-recurring'. The plan is an important step in delivering on this vision. It sets out an overarching framework with actions to improve the wellbeing and housing outcomes of individuals and whanau who are at risk of, or experiencing, homelessness. The plan has 18 immediate actions to be put in place in 2020, and a further 18 longer-term actions to be developed for implementation over 2020-2023. By taking the immediate actions, we will support over 10,000 people at risk of or experiencing homelessness over three years.
HUD.002.1898	2019	Government Document	Homelessness Action Plan - Immediate Actions Factsheet	Ministry of Housing and Urban Development;	(Ministry of Housing and Urban Development);	An immediate 18 actions will support over 10,000 individuals and whanau with an investment of over $300 million (a total of $337.22 million over three years). This is in addition to the significant investment in increasing public housing and the continued roll out of Housing First. The plan also includes longer-term actions to be developed over the next three years.

HUD.002.1918	2019	Report	Central government: Results of the 2018/19 audits	Office of the Auditor General;	(Office of the Auditor General);	Government spending in New Zealand is about 37% of gross domestic product. How the Government manages its finances is therefore a significant determinant of the financial state of our nation. The Government's financial statements draw on the financial information of more than 2000 public organisations. Together, they provide an account of what the Government collected in revenue (largely, people's taxes), what it spent, and how much we collectively own (the Crown's assets) and owe (the Crown's debt). The accountability of the Government is critical to Parliament and to the people of New Zealand for the taxes it collects and spends. Independent audit assurance is fundamental to this accountability.

HUD.002.1940	2019	Report	Report of the Independent Review of New Zealand's 2018 Census	Statistics New Zealand;	(Stats NZ Tauranga Aotearoa);	Following minimal-change censuses in 2006 and 2013, Statistics New Zealand embarked on a significant change journey with the 2018 Census. The design principles for the 2018 Census were feasible and were influenced by a successful methodology adopted internationally, particularly in Australia and Canada, beginning in the mid-2000s. The changes in approach were necessary to combat the increased costs of conducting a traditional census, and in response to pressure to remain relevant as well as improve the quality and timeliness of census outputs. The growing reluctance of citizens to participate was evident in declining response rates over time, while the availability and sharing of administrative data across government were ever-increasing.
